Unit Big Ideas:

(What Fundamental Concepts Should be Learned during this Unit?)

- What is artistic reflection and what work have I done in previous years art classes?
- When examining previous work holistically does the work show common themes, narratives, or aesthetic choices that recur?
- Why is it important for 3-D artists to be able to photograph their work professionally?
- How do 3-D artists document their work using professional photography tools and practices?
- What is artistic integrity and how do artists make original artworks without plagiarizing other's work?

Objectives

Students will be able to...

- Demonstrate ability to document 3-D works using photography principles
- Demonstrate ability to reflect on work made in previous art classes and identify pieces that exemplify the mastery of concept, composition, and the 3-D elements of art and Principles of Design
- Identify common themes that already exist in personal work
- Identify the importance of artistic integrity and the importance of making work that moves beyond duplication

- How do artists show personal artistic voice and style through sustained investigations?
- What creative thinking skills are utilized in a sustained artistic investigation and how do those skills apply to other fields?
- How does one pick a “Concentration” topic that allows for a variety of creative avenues as opposed to limiting creativity and range?

Objectives

Students will be able to...

- Demonstrate a personal exploration of a central idea
- Demonstrate growth and discovery throughout the original body of work
- Identify a personal interest or central topic to cover over a series of at least 3 pieces.
